Ressumè di contegnus	M1 – Management The course M1 Management deals with the theoretical concepts and practical tools that are key to a successful firm's management. Particularly, the course provides an overview of: • The concept of management and the role of managers • The fundamentals of a firm's organization • The fundamentals of a firm's decision-making To enhance comprehension, students participate in polls during theoretical lectures, while exercise sessions are offered to facilitate the practical application of theoretical concepts.

	M2 MARKETING This course teaches students the basic theories, concepts and instruments of modern marketing. The focus is on market analysis, consumer behaviour consumer behaviour and insights into the development and implementation of marketing marketing strategies. The students also learn about practice-orientated approaches to designing the marketing mix. This creates a understanding of the role and functioning of marketing in and for marketing in and for companies
Argomenc dl curs	M1 Management This course provides students with an overview of the theoretical concepts and practical tools that are key to a successful firm's management. The course initially offers an introduction to the concept of management and the role of a manager. It then covers the fundamentals of two major aspects of a firm's management: organization and decision-making. For each topic, essential concepts, theories, and methods are presented with the help of practical examples and exercises. M2 Marketing This course offers students a comprehensive introduction to the basic theories, central concepts and essential tools of modern marketing. The aim is to create a sound basis for understanding how marketing generates value for both customers and companies in our rapidly changing environment. Particular attention is paid to the strategic role of marketing within organisations and its influence on company performance. A central focus is initially on market analysis. Students learn how to systematically analyse market structures, competitive dynamics and trends. Various methods and analytical approaches for evaluating the internal and external environment are covered. Another important subject area is the understanding of consumer behaviour. Students gain insights into the psychological, social and cultural factors that influence the purchasing behaviour of individuals and groups. In this context, the decision-making processes, customer needs and the customer journey are examined in more detail.

	The course also provides insights into the development and implementation of marketing strategies. Students learn how companies identify target markets and develop customised value propositions. Possible topics include brand management, competitive strategies and the development of long-term customer relationships. In addition, practical and application-orientated approaches to designing and managing the marketing mix (4Ps: product, price, place, promotion) are taught. Case studies and practical examples are used to show how companies can develop and successfully implement holistic marketing strategies.

Argomenc dl curs	The course provides students with a comprehensive introduction to the fundamental theories, core concepts, and essential tools of modern marketing. The course is designed to build a solid foundation for understanding how marketing creates value for both customers and businesses in our rapidly changing environments. Importantly, the course puts an emphasis on the strategic role of marketing within organizations and its impact on performance. A central focus of the course is on market analysis, where students learn how to systematically assess market structures, competitive dynamics, and trends. This includes exploring various methods and frameworks of analyzing the internal and external environment. Another key area is understanding consumer behavior. Students gain insights into the psychological, social, and cultural factors that influence how individuals and groups make purchasing decisions. In this context, we cover decision-making processes, customer needs, and the customer journey.

	The course also provides insights into the development and implementation of marketing strategies, helping students understand how companies identify target markets and design value propositions to serve them effectively. Topics may include brand management, competitive strategy, and long-term customer relationship building. In addition, students are introduced to practical and hands-on approaches to designing and managing the 4Ps of the marketing mix: product, price, place, and promotion. Through case studies and real-world examples, we explore how companies build and manage a holistic marketing strategy.
