Contents Summary	The course illustrates the ways democratic concerns translate into policies, citizens' initiatives, and design features of political institutions. Among the objectives is to show that initiatives aimed at shaping democratic experience and 'everyday democracy' can help citizens break the mold of old, potentially undemocratic routines. Guest lecturers (academics, practitioners, public officials, etc.) will contribute to the course with their first-hand experience.
Course Topics	The concept of design applied to policies; prototyping; bringing creativity to bear on democratic progress; co-creation and co-production as assets in democratic development; how to use design thinking to counter democratic backsliding; what is active citizenship.

Keywords	policy design; design thinking; citizens' engagement; democratic participation; democratic backsliding
Recommended Prerequisites
Propaedeutic Courses
Teaching Format	Lectures, guest-lectures, group discussions, students' presentations on case studies, in-class labs. The course alternates two-hour and four-hour lectures, starting on October 1, 2025. In-class group-work will be focused on preparing a CERV (Citizens, Equality, Rights & Values) project. We will examine the template of the application form and work out the best strategy to go about the project.
Mandatory Attendance	Attendance is recommended, but not mandatory.
