Ressumé di contegnus	Building on the introduction to philosophical thought in the course "Fundamentals of Philosophy 1", the course deals with some of the

	basic metaphysical positions of modernity from Descartes to Leibniz and Kant to Nietzsche. The questions about the nature of man and the meaning of truth and knowledge are developed from the fundamental trait of modernity, the will based on subjectivity. References to an "original economy" and an outlook on thinking from the end of philosophy round off the range of topics.
Argomenc dl curs	The course follows on directly from "Fundamentals of Philosophy I" and picks up on topics covered there. However, participation in that course is not a prerequisite. Topics: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- The development of modern philosophy (Descartes, Kant, Leibniz, Nietzsche, Heidegger);</li> <li>- the structure of a basic metaphysical position;</li> <li>- the question of truth;</li> <li>- the nature of (modern) man;</li> <li>- the structure of scientific knowledge;</li> <li>- "two natures";</li> <li>- the relationship between philosophy, science and art;</li> <li>- fundamental ethics and original economics;</li> <li>- the end of philosophy and the future task of thinking.</li> </ul>
