Sintesi contenuti	In this course, we examine the special features of professional team sports leagues, the labour markets in professional sports, and the organisation of major sporting events from an economic perspective. In addition, we examine the market for amateur and recreational sports from a health economics perspective and explore the political significance of both competitive and recreational sports. This enables us to formulate recommendations for action not only for event organisers, but also for politicians, professional athletes and amateur athletes.

Argomenti dell'insegnamento	The course introduces and discusses the institutional framework, theoretical models and empirical findings of the sports industry. A particular focus is placed on applying economic concepts to the sports industry and comparing the findings with results from other markets. The individual topics are: 1) Supply and demand in sport 2) Production 3) Market structures 4) Economics of sports teams 5) Monopoly and antitrust law 6) Strategic pricing 7) Major sporting events 8) Data and empirical analyses in sport

Criteri di valutazione	Students attending classes The course assessment is composed as follows: 1) Written examination (60 minutes) – 60% of the final grade The written examination must be passed in order to pass the overall examination, regardless of individual additional achievements. The examination contains open-ended questions and multiple-choice questions. Answers are assessed on the basis of clarity, completeness and accuracy. 2) Individual presentation – 40% of the final grade The presentation is based on a research article selected by the lecturer or in consultation with the students. Students not attending classes

	Non-participating students replace the presentation with an extended final examination. The additional part of the final examination includes questions on a scientific research article selected either by the lecturer or in consultation with the students. Non-participating students must contact the lecturer independently regarding the selection of the scientific research article. This must be done by 19 October at the latest. The same assessment ratio applies to non-participating students: 60% regular part of the final examination, 40% extended part of the final examination. The standard part of the written examination must be passed in order to pass the overall examination, regardless of the results in the extended part of the examination.
