Contents Summary	The course deals with communication in European policy campaigns.

	The particular challenge for institutional communication in the EU is that the current public debate is characterised by questions of identity and values, by social and political resistance, by the return of national stereotypes – in short, by a high degree of politicisation of integration. The course deals with the communication of various campaigns and presents them using concrete examples.
Course Topics	The course will begin by discussing integration theory approaches and their implications for political communication in campaigns. The historical developments from the first European elections in 1979 to the campaigns in the 1980s, 1990s and 2010s are examined on the basis of the framework conditions and the respective campaign concepts (including narration, empathy, emotional expressions and humour as forms of communication). Finally, we will take a look at failed and even withdrawn EU communication campaigns against the backdrop of increasing politicisation.
Teaching Format	Variety of frontal units, group work and presentations in student teams.

Contents Summary	The educational objective of the course is to provide students with an orientation in the very broad fields of culture and aesthetics. As an interdisciplinary course, it shows how the fields of art, literature, philosophical aesthetics and society intersect. Historical developments are used to illustrate developments that continue to have an impact in the present. Key elements for understanding the culture and aesthetics of modernity and the present day are intermediality and hybridity, the mechanisms of which are taught.
Course Topics	The content focuses on culture and aesthetics, particularly in the modern and contemporary periods. The break with the past that manifested itself around 1900 plays a central role. The focus will be on intermediality (text - image), which has been a specific characteristic of the period since 1900. The starting points are Mallarmé, Marinetti, Picasso and Kandinsky. Via the various isms of the 20th century, we arrive at contemporary buzzwords such as the democratisation of culture, cancel culture, looted art and the question of restitution.
Teaching Format	The teaching style can best be described as mixed: lectures are always accompanied by dialogue-based sessions. In exercises, students independently explore topics that are then discussed in plenary sessions. Working in pairs, students submit a written paper on a topic covered in the course. Three excursions focus on aspects of traditional culture (Diocesan Museum), the architecture of razionalismo of the 1930s (Bolzano) and contemporary culture (Museion; Dalle Nogare Foundation, Bolzano).
