Inhaltsangabe	The course provides the foundational knowledge to understand and acquire the key themes, analytical approaches, and methods of the sociology of territory, with the aim of interpreting contemporary social change in relation to broader processes of territorial transformation. Special attention will be given to the concepts of territorial identity and sustainability, as well as to their

	associated processes of social construction. Initially, the course will offer a general framework of the discipline, focusing on the sociological conceptualization of territory, and analyzing a series of related concepts such as space and place, with the goal of establishing a shared reference glossary. The course will then proceed by presenting fundamental processes of territorial transformation, such as urbanization, the creation of urban-rural divides, the definition of territorial inequalities and "left-behind" places, and environmental crises. It will conclude with a reflection on the construction and design of local development as a shared arena to foster contextual trajectories of sustainability.

Art der Prüfung	Attending students will be assessed through a project work, on topics agreed upon with the lecturer, partly developed and presented in class during the course, and a final written exam based on the materials from the entire programme, as analysed and discussed in class. The project work will account for 40% of the final grade, and will evaluate knowledge and understanding of the texts, analytical competence, and the ability to apply knowledge to potential professional situations with sound judgment. The written exam will account for 60%, assessing theoretical knowledge, analytical competence, and the ability to connect topics and synthesize information. Both will be graded on a scale of 30, and the final grade will be the weighted average of the two assessments. The written exam will consist of 5 open-ended questions (max. 6 points per question) to be completed within 1 hour and 15 minutes. For non-attending students, an oral exam on the program topics will be held, where theoretical knowledge, the ability to connect topics and synthesize information, analytical competence, the ability to apply knowledge to potential professional situations, and independent judgment will be assessed.
